However, you won't be able to download videos. I think about this a lot, probably more than is healthy. But because I think, I write and blog, even though I have little insight to offer. I think it's something like the common saying that the scriptures are the best way to study. I know personally, that's true. The scriptures are what got my wife and I saved. I have an entire book dedicated to our conversion. It's been 12 years since I believed. So my opinion is that I think it's correct. The good thing about being so proud of your own faith is that while most people follow it, not many actually believe it. The world is full of people who practice it, but only few who actually believe it. But what's so sad is that, while even many true believers go through periods when they doubt and fall away, little or nothing is done

Reply with this form. I don't know, or hardly know, what led to the pressure from above. I'm still not sure if this was a goal or not. Maybe something else. But the dragon's legs loomed large over me, an intimidating presence. I can recall, without looking at my notebook, the words in my Diary: ‘I was a bit upset at work today. I was told to bring in all the material on the Sufi threads and cut them all down to the bare minimum – minimal quotes. I don’t think anybody will remember their exact words so we might as well leave them out. I don’t want to upset anybody. It’s too bad. I could have done it. But then again, they wouldn't have remembered it if it hadn't come from me. I'll be happy if a half-page can be included.' I haven't looked at this in ages. I don't think it's any good. It's not my writing. I feel, though, a need to remind you that I was once here, active, creative, and immersed in the Sufi world, with a sense of responsibility and ethics
